Conflict Resolution Program

Communication Studies Department
Humanities Building, Room 289
Coordinator: Dr. Ashmi Desai

Program Scope

The purpose of the Conflict Resolution Certificate is to learn to manage conflicting positions in various contexts and to develop constructive ways to engage in dispute management or conflict negotiation. Students may use this certificate to enhance their understanding of the critical role that conflict and its resolution play in the world today. This certificate complements degree programs in Communication, Criminal Justice, Labor and Employment Studies, Ethnic Studies, Business, International Relations, Psychology, Political Science, and Women and Gender Studies.

Note: Non-degree students apply through the College of Professional & Global Education, (415) 405-7700. For additional information, visit www.cel.sfsu.edu (<http://www.cel.sfsu.edu/>). The Certificate in Conflict Resolution is available to anyone admitted through the College of Professional & Global Education/Open University.

Career Outlook

Completion of the certificate contributes to a student's preparation for employment in such fields as counseling, criminal justice, diplomacy, education, government, human resources, international relations, labor, law, management, mediation, public relations, and social work.

Certificate in Conflict Resolution

It is recommended that General Education Areas A and B4 be completed prior to students beginning this program. Students must pass a GEAR course before receiving the certificate.

Note: Courses in the certificate may be substituted on advisement. At least three courses in the certificate must have a prefix that is different from the student's major prefix.
